SHADBAKE IS PLANNED.

Washington Yacht Club to Hold Outing Next Month.

The second annual shad bake of the Washington Yacht Club will be held early part of next month at some convenient place on the Potomac, and a special committee has been selected to arrange for the affair.

At the annual meeting of the club a few evenings ago at the clubrooms the following officers were elected: Commodore, L. J. Johnston; vice commodore, Wilbur Jarvis; secretary, E. M. Collins; secretary-treasurer, Richard G. Taylor; trustees, Thomas Keely and K. Rudin.

Owing to the beginning of the work on the reclamation of the Anacostia flats between the two bridges, the site of the present quarters of the club will be located on the Potomac river. The new site has been leased there and plans now are being made for the erection of a modern clubroom. The club has been in existence but two years, but during that time has largely increased its membership.

There are now fifty boats in the fleet and two more modern boats will be added in the near future as the work on the shad bakes belongs to Mr. Warrant and Mr. Taylor is hearing completion.

POWER LAUNCH IS REBUILT.

Capt. Hamberger's Boat to Be in Service Again This Summer.

After having been badly damaged in a fire that about a year ago destroyed the house adjoining Regan's boatyard, at the foot of 14th street, the power launch belonging to Capt. Hamberger is being rebuilt, and in the coming summer will be in service on the river. When the fire occurred the launch was almost completed and in a few weeks would have been ready for service. After the fire it looked as if the boat was hardly worth rebuilding and her owner offered to sell it for a small sum, but could find no purchasers.

Later he made an examination of the planking on her stern would have to be renewed, the other timbers were only slightly charred. Others also made an examination and then wanted to buy the boat, but Capt. Hamberger had determined to rebuild her. He is now practically complete and as soon as the house can be placed on the boat and the engine installed it will be ready for service.

The fourteenth annual convention of the Essex Funeral Benefit Association was held Friday afternoon in the old Masonic Temple. The association is composed of representatives of all the branches of the Junior Order United American Mechanics of the states of New York, New Jersey, Pennsylvania and the District of Columbia, each council having until this convention two delegates.

The convention was welcomed to the city by State Councilor E. L. Balderson, George S. Thompson, secretary of the convention, responding. The convention was called to order at 2:30 o'clock by the president, E. L. Benson. The secretary, G. S. Thompson, and the treasurer, S. Furman, submitted their reports for the past year, which showed the books to be in a satisfactory financial condition.

Among the changes in the laws was one limiting the membership to one representative from each territory, with the provision for an alternate, instead of two representatives, as previously, and the admission of patriotic organizations other than the Junior Order United American Mechanics to membership.

All of the officers were re-elected. Atlantic City, N. J., was chosen as the place for the 1914 convention.

CONSIDERS PENSIONERS ON MERIT OF CASES

Bristow Doubtful of Those Retired for Age Who Earn Money Later.

Senator Bristow of Kansas, discussing last night the question whether or not pensioners on the police and firemen's pension roll of the District who are receiving as much as $750 to $1,000 while working for the government now, should have their pensions discontinued, declared that he doubted the wisdom of continuing the placing of those pensioners on the roll must be taken into consideration.

"If a policeman was beaten up by thieves while on duty, or a fireman was hurt by a falling wall or otherwise injured while performing his hazardous duty, I believe that a pension would be justified," said Senator Bristow, "even though the man was earning some money working after his injury. He took his life in his hands in performing his duty and received injuries. It is the same with the soldier or sailor injured in battle."

Age Question Different.

"But if a man is retired because of old age, and then goes to work and makes good money, I am not so sure that his pension should be continued.

"A big demand is being made upon Congress now for the enactment of laws providing pensions for the civil employees of the government. The pensions given the police and firemen of the District of Columbia and the only civil pensions under the supervision of the federal government that I know of and I believe that it will be well for us to have all the information regarding them that we can. If abuses are to be found, it will be necessary to correct them."

Senator Bristow was asked if he would advise the withdrawal of United States pensions, granted for military service, in cases where the pensioners have well paying jobs under the government. He said that military pensions must be considered entirely separate from the civil pensions, since men in the military service took their lives in their hands when they went to the army.

He admitted that members of the police and fire departments also were engaged in dangerous activities.

PASSING OF CAPT. OWENS.

Prominent River Man and Vessel Master Succumbs at Occoquan.

Capt. Thomas A. Owens, master and owner of the steam barge Daniel K. Jackson, who died at his home at Occoquan, Va., early in the week, was well known at this city as well as at all the landings along the river and from which the Jackson carried freight.

Before taking up navigation Capt. Owens was a blacksmith with a shop in the southeastern section of the city. Tiring of swinging the hammer he had the Jackson built in this city in 1891, and has operated her in general freighting work since that time.

Capt. Owens was a close friend among the rivermen and his death is greatly regretted. His wife and four children survive him. His son, who has had command of the Jackson for several months past, will continue in charge of her and will take her to North Carolina next month.

TUG CHANGES HANDS.

Camilla Transferred to Baltimore Parties by Taylor & Bro.

A. J. Taylor & Bro. of this city have sold the tug Camilla to Baltimore and the vessel left here Friday for Baltimore to take up work there. The papers transferring the vessel to its new owners were recorded in the custom house at Georgetown late Thursday afternoon, and on the arrival of the Camilla at this city with an oil-laden barge in tow from Baltimore she was turned over to her purchasers.

Though small in hull, the Camilla is a partially engine boat, and towed big schooners laden with coal and ice between the mouth of the river and this city in from twelve to fourteen hours. It looks as if vessels with ice will seldom come to this city or Alexandria in the future, and as business for a tug of the Camilla class was turned over to her purchasers.

OYSTERS COMMISSION RETURNS.

Investigators of Pollution to Begin Work on Report.

The Potomac river oyster commission, which is engaged in an investigation of polluted oysters in the Potomac river, has just returned from a four-day trip from Washington to a point in Chesapeake bay some distance outside the mouth of the river. This is the last trip the members of the commission will make for some time. They will now begin the preparation of their report covering other trips and investigations which they have made all during the oyster season.

The trip from which the men have just returned was made to obtain samples of the water and also of the oysters at points along the river from the War College down, at this time of the year. The other trips were made at the beginning of the season and during the middle of the season. From data obtained on these trips the commission expects its report to cover the conditions existing at all times.

The trip was made in the revenue cutter Apache, Dr. George W. Stiles of the Department of Agriculture, and a member of the commission, declared this morning that he could state just what the findings of the commission might be. The other members of the commission, all of whom made the trip are: Representing Maryland, Dr. William R. Stokes, state bacteriologist, and Dr. W. W. Randall, state chemist; representing Virginia, Dr. Mead Ferguson, state bacteriologist, and Dr. E. W. Magruder, state chemist; representing the Department of Agriculture, Dr. George W. Stiles and J. W. Sale of the bureau of chemistry.

DOCKED FOR REPAIRS.

Army Engineers' Tug Castle at Baltimore Shipyard.

Though work is being pushed on the United States Army steamer Castle, tender to the United States engineers' office at this city, at the Spodden shipyard, at Baltimore, it will be the first part of this week or early in the coming week before she is completed and ready to return to her station here. The engine and boiler of the tug are being overhauled and she is to be docked to have her hull under water scraped and painted while the remainder of the boat is being freshened up for summer service. Capt. George Bell, master of the Castle, has remained with her at the shipyard to superintend the work being done aboard her.

When she leaves the shipyard, it is stated, the Castle will visit the fish nets in the lower river to ascertain whether the law regarding the distance they can be located from each shore is being violated, and to obtain the names of the net owners who are allowed limits.

Later in the season the Castle will visit the York river and other navigable waters along the western shore of Chesapeake bay.

Scottish Clans.

That the officers of the Royal Clan, Order of Scottish Clans, have Washington in mind as the place to hold the international convention two years hence was indicated in a letter just received by Acting Secretary Alexander Robertson of Clan MacLennan, No. 226, of this city, from Peter Kerr of Boston, royal secretary.

No intimation had been sent Secretary Kerr prior to writing his letter that Alexander MacLennan, past chief of the local clan, elected as delegate to the convention to be held in Philadelphia next August, had been instructed to make inquiry as to the chances of obtaining the convention for the capital in 1915. The conventions of the Royal Clan are held every other year.

AIMED AT BLIND ALLEYS.

Bill Proposed by Commissioners Exacts Stricter Building Regulations.

Construction of dwellings on alleys unless they are thirty feet wide throughout the block, from one street to another, will be prohibited. If Congress enacts into law a bill which has been transmitted to it by the Commissioners of the District of Columbia.

Under the present law, dwellings may be erected fronting on alleys thirty feet wide, if the alley runs through the square, from one street to another, with an exit at each end not less than fifteen feet wide. The proposed law not only will require the exits to be at least thirty feet wide, but will prevent the construction of dwellings on alleys that are not provided with sewer, water and lights. It also provides that where dwellings not existing in alleys have been depreciated in value more than 50 per cent they shall not be repaired or re-erected unless they comply with the provisions of the proposed law.

CONTEST FOR GUESTS.

Event Arranged as One Board of Trade Shad Bake Feature.

An athletic contest for guests will be one of the features of the entertainment to be provided at the nineteenth annual shad bake of the Board of Trade, to be held at River View May 21, according to an announcement made last night at the regular weekly meeting of the general arrangements committee.

Heretofore the athletic contests at the shad bake of the board have been for members only. This year there will be an event for non-members who attend the outing as guests. It is understood that the event will be so arranged that it will be suitable for both young and old men.

Walter L. Elliot, chairman of the music committee, reported that Nalls' Band has been selected to furnish music for the outing.

Odell S. Smith, chairman of the souvenir committee, reported that among the things to be distributed will be match safes, packages of cigarettes, pencils, paper cutters and other useful articles.

E. R. Brooks reported that he already has been able to get fifteen prizes for the winners of the oyster season. The prizes have been donated by Washington merchants.

L. W. Teller Enters Naval Academy.

Among the few successful candidates in recent examinations for admission to the Naval Academy is Leslie W. Teller, a Washington boy. He was graduated from Technical High School last June. Out of 210 boys from all parts of the country, only forty-nine were successful in the examinations.

CLAMS SUPPLANTING OYSTERS.

Crabs Also Expected to Be on Sale in Quantities Soon.

While under the Virginia and Maryland oyster protection laws it is now illegal to take oysters from the beds in the river and Chesapeake bay, those who took oysters before the close of the season have fifteen days in which to dispose of them, and vessels with small cargoes of the bivalves are expected to continue to come to the oyster wharf for the next week or two. Even after that time those who want oysters can obtain them without difficulty, as there is no closed season in the District and the dealers have them on sale from one end of the year to the other.

The coming of warm weather has made the demand for oysters very light, and clams are largely taking their place on the table in Washington homes. The clams are brought here from points along Chesapeake bay in small flatboats and Rhode Island crabs will be coming from the lower Potomac and will be on sale at the wharf market.
